In the Center of it All—and Growing!

Centrally located in the heart of West Virginia, Bridgeport is a hub for meetings, conferences, youth sports, shopping and dining. With easy access from Interstate 79 and Route 50, Bridgeport is a convenient drive from almost any location in West Virginia.

The name Bridgeport was born out of a cartographer's mistake. Settled in the mid-1700s by early fur traders who came west over the Allegheny Mountains, Bridgeport was originally named Bridge Fort in reference to a bridge over Simpson's creek that connected local forts. However, due to the mapmaker's misspelling, the town became Bridgeport.

Much of the new development in Bridgeport over the last several years has happened at Charles Pointe. Charles Pointe is a $1.4 billion state-of-the-art mixed use community spanning over 1,700 acres along the I-79 High Tech Corridor. Highlighted by the Bridgeport Conference Center, the area features hotels, restaurants, retail, office space and recreation venues. Most recently, Charles Pointe Crossing has been developed, with anchor store Menards already open, the complex will be readily growing.

Bridgeport is also home of a stellar parks and recreation program which includes a pool, multiple parks, public lakes, walking trails and much more.

It is easy to drive to Bridgeport, but that is not the only way to get here. The North Central West Virginia Airport (CKB) is located in Bridgeport. The airport is currently served by two commercial airlines; Allegiant and Contour Airlines. Allegiant offers service to Orlando/Sanford, Destin, St. Petersburg, FL and Myrtle Beach, SC while Contour offers global connectivity through its Charlotte hub. Expected to be completed in late-2024 is a new state-of-the-art terminal which will further expand air travel opportunities.

Throughout all its growth, Bridgeport residents have maintained a small community atmosphere. The community is very family-oriented and members work together to provide advantages to all. From fairs and festivals to Bridgeport Farmers Market, Bridgeport has something for everyone.
